237. Would you rather have an Elf on the Shelf that moves around your house every night or one that never leaves the shelf and just turns its head to stare at you?

238. Would you rather have an advent calendar with a good chocolate behind every door or one with 23 empty doors and $50 behind one of them?

239. Would you rather be the big-city lawyer in a Hallmark movie who has to save a small-town bakery by Christmas Eve, or the bakery owner who has to put up with them?

240. Would you rather have your whole December narrated by a deep-voiced Christmas movie trailer announcer or have a choir start singing every time something goes wrong?

241. Would you rather get a visit from Door-Slammer, the Icelandic Yule Lad who slams doors all night, or from Window-Peeper, who stares in through your windows?

242. Would you rather get your Christmas presents the Catalan way, by hitting a log with a stick until it "poops" them out, or have to dig every one out of a snowbank?

243. Would you rather start Christmas in September like a lot of families in the Philippines or squeeze the whole thing into December 24th and 25th?

244. Would you rather watch the same 1958 Donald Duck Christmas special at 3 p.m. every Christmas Eve, like half of Sweden does, or whatever three-hour movie your dad picks every year?

245. Would you rather get your tongue stuck to a frozen flagpole in front of your whole school or wear the pink bunny suit from A Christmas Story to every party in December?

246. Would you rather dance a solo in The Nutcracker in front of 2,000 people after one week of practice or actually fight the Mouse King?

247. Would you rather work for Scrooge before the ghosts show up or after, when he won't stop hugging everyone and crying?

248. Would you rather eat Buddy the Elf's spaghetti with maple syrup and candy for breakfast every day in December or answer your work phone "Buddy the Elf, what's your favorite color?"

249. Would you rather let Jack Skellington run Christmas this year, with shrunken heads and snakes under the tree, or have your town cancel Christmas altogether?

250. Would you rather have a total stranger take the empty seat at your Christmas Eve dinner or your least favorite relative?

251. Would you rather have to sing everything you say on Christmas Day like it's a musical or only be able to talk in Christmas movie quotes?

252. Would you rather watch a brand-new Hallmark Christmas movie every night in December or the exact same one every night?

253. Would you rather be Kevin in Home Alone, with two burglars on the way, or his mom, stuck in Paris trying to get home?

254. Would you rather have "All I Want for Christmas Is You" start playing every time you walk into a room or "Last Christmas" every time you leave one?

255. Would you rather hear Christmas music everywhere from November 1 or not hear a single Christmas song until December 24?

256. Would you rather have a real Christmas tree that makes the whole house smell like pine or a fake one you never have to water or vacuum up after?

257. Would you rather open your presents on Christmas Eve or on Christmas morning?

258. Would you rather live on a street where every house goes all out with Christmas lights or one where every window just has a single candle?
